Cocaine possession draws $1000 fine in Minden court

A fine of $1000 or 100 days in jail has been assessed against a Minden man who pleaded guilty to possession of cocaine.

The fine was levied by Judge George Inrig when Patrick Johnson of Minden appeared before him in court last Wednesday.

The court was told that officers from the Minden detachment of the Ontario Provincial Police had been involved in an investigation concerning Patrick Johnson and others. On February 5 a search warrant was obtained for the residence where Johnson lived, at the Orange Grove Resort on the Gull River south of Minden.

Constable Dave MacMartin of the Minden OPP detachment, accompanied by other officers, went to the residence but discovered that no one was home. The police, acting on the authority of the warrant, then entered the building and began to search the premises.

The search uncovered a plastic bag which the police had discovered. The man said he was aware of the bag and that it contained cocaine, but said the drug was not his property. He admitted to having used the drug.

The court was told that Johnson had been found guilty in 1982 and again in 1983 on charges of possession of a narcotic.

Federal Crown prosecutor, Scott McLeod, suggested that an appropriate fine in this instance should be $1000.00.

Johnson's defence attorney presented a letter to the court from Johnson's employer which said the man was an honest and hardworking employee.

The lawyer said that while the accused admitted using the drug, he denied ownership of the contents of the bag. The defence attorney described the $1000 as a "substantial sum" for the man to pay.

Judge Inrig questioned the contention that Johnson did not "own" the drug. He pointed out that Johnson was in charge of the residence where the drug was found and admitted the use of the drug.

After levying the $1000 fine, the accused was given 90 days to pay.

Keith McKelvey was one of a number of cubs and beavers who participated in the annual Trees for Canada tree planting program, May 2. The boys and their leaders and parents planted thousands of trees on property north of Minden. The project not only helps are reforestation efforts, but also serves as a fund raiser for the local scouting association. Keith, in the three photographs here, demonstrates some of the innovative techniques used by the youngsters to plant the young trees.

A strange and different world

"I saw this guy come through the door with a machine gun and a belt of ammunition over his shoulder. The barman, I could see, was looking a little nervous. I said to my wife, 'If you see any whisky bottles break, hit the deck!' But the guy quietly laid down his gun, ate his dinner and left. No one bothered him so he didn't shoot."

"Things are so different it'll blow your mind."

That's what Elgin Stouffer has to say about Peru after spending two months in the South American country.

Stouffer went with Canadian Executive Services Organization, a volunteer group affiliated with the Canadian government whose members offer their expertise to over 50 developing countries. Though he's presently a real estate salesman with Bowes and Cocks in Minden, Stouffer has considerable previous experience with the lumber industry. It is his knowledge of this business the Peruvians were interested in.

He's been to the Third World before, but Stouffer says he was still not completely prepared for completely foreign landscape and culture he found in Peru.

"When you go to any developing country," he explains, "you face some basic problems. You have to get used to the food, you have to learn to understand the money system... And you have to learn a few basic

New problems worry Dorset MOE

The Ministry of the Environment's Dorset Research Centre has extended its focus to include toxic substances in the atmosphere as well as acid precipitation.

The development, says centre public relations agent Janet Frazer, occurred gradually over the past year.

"Studies don't just start suddenly and then end at a particular point," Frazer explains. "They grow and develop. Several studies might begin from the results of only one."

She says the research centre has begun looking at "toxic rain" or precipitation that includes small amounts of PCBs and dioxins.

The Dorset Research Centre began in the 1970's as a centre for lake shore capacity study. In the eighties, scientists at the centre began to shift their research toward acid rain and its effects on the ecology.

Now scientists at Dorset will be looking at certain toxins - known as organics - in the atmosphere.

The Environment Ministry chose Dorset for their laboratory because the surrounding area is particularly susceptible to acid rain. The granite rocks around much of the Muskoka Haliburton region offer little protection from its effects.

It has also been learned that when lakes become acidic, trace metals, some of them dangerous, are leached from soil and rocks.

Scientists now know as well that acid levels in lake water have a direct effect on the growth of some species of algae. These species thrive when the pH drops below certain levels.

Researchers at Dorset have learned that 5-per cent of Ontario's acid rain comes from the United States.

Acid rain report

The following report on recent precipitation events is based on information gathered at the Ministry of Environment acid rain testing station in Dorset, as compiled by Environment Canada. There was only one precipitation event recorded during the latest reporting period.

- April 27, 8 mm of rain, pH 4.4, from New York, southern Ontario.

Environmental damage is usually observed in sensitive areas regularly receiving precipitation with pH less than 4.7. Readings of 4.0 pH or less are considered dangerous. The lower the reading, the more acidic the precipitation.

Reversing a trend

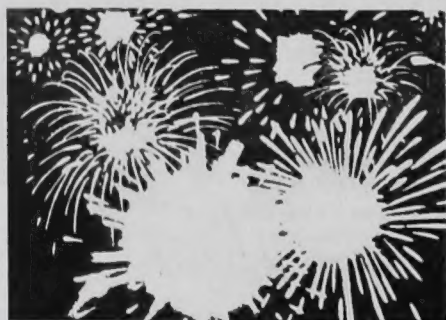

Property owners in Haliburton County seeking a refuge from spiralling taxes will have to wait at least another year, perhaps longer, before finding that the increase on the tax bill does not outstrip inflation. This certainly isn't the year to hold your breath in anticipation. As a matter of fact, it would be wise to find a comfortable seat when opening your tax bill.

Most municipal budgets have yet to be formally announced, but already a 33% increase in the county requirement and a 10.6% boost in the board of education budget foretells what is ahead when all the numbers are totalled and the final figure struck. County property owners will see their annual payments to support municipal level services jump, and jump dramatically.

Most will likely accept the situation as just part of life's two inevitables - death and taxes. But perhaps it is time to take a stand, to let those entrusted with the power to demand resources for the common good, know that we'd like a little for our individual use as well. Because, as most economists will acknowledge, no matter what well-intentioned projects the tax increase is collected for, in most cases an equal or greater benefit will accrue by allowing the same amount of money to remain active in the economy.

Of course, it is always easy to rail against tax increases, particularly of the size (in relation to inflation) presented so far. But, contrary to what many may think, taxes do not have to go up every year. This year in the County of Hastings, just east of Haliburton County, taxes have decreased. In the Village of Bancroft, for example, the county portion of the local tax bill is down 3%.

It is obviously too late for this year's budgets, but it would certainly be refreshing if elected officials at all levels took notice of this interesting trend in Hastings County and applied it here.

Yard sale mania

- by Arthur Black -

It's hard to believe that they're sprouting already. Just a few short weeks ago all those front lawns were covered with snow and whipped with bone-chilling winds that nothing could survive. Now the snow is gone, the grass is green and already the beggars are towering over the lawns, even climbing up the sides of the buildings and hydro poles.

Lower that can of 2-4-D madam...stand easy with that Whipper Snipper sir...I'm not talking about pokeweed, bindweed, chokeweed or any of your common lawn and garden variety vegetative infestations.

I'm talking about yard sale signs.

They're a surer sign of spring than vireos on the verandah or potholes in the pavement, are yard sales. An indication that hope springs eternal and a reminder that junk is forever.

That's what yard and garage sales are really about -- junk. The fact that money changes hands at yard sales is to keep that junk circulating. It moves from my attic to your basement, from your basement to my garage, from my garage to your rec room.

I wonder why we like them so? Lord knows most of us don't need any more baggage in our lives, but every Saturday and Sunday you'll see carsful of beady-eyed people, crawling down side streets and back alleys, eyes peeled for the cardboard signs or the telltale traffic jams that bespeak a yard sale in progress.

I know families that have given up going to movies and baseball games in favour of yard sales. Each Friday evening they scour the want ads in the newspaper, plot their course as carefully as Captain Cook in search of the Spice Islands, then spend their weekends blissfully prowling from one address to another.

Going to garage sales is only half of the experience of course. The other half comes when -- due primarily to the tons of thoroughly useless detritus you've picked up yourself at garage sales, the sickening realization dawns on you that you have to hold one yourself.

As a battle-scarred and shell-shocked veteran of two full-fledged yard sales allow me to give any greenhorns in the audience a word of advice.

The word is don't.

Hold a garage sale, I mean.

Better to mail your junk to a Third World country, haul it to the dump, even dig a hole in the back yard and bury it -- anything but hold a garage sale. You're not strong enough. Nobody is.

But I know you're going to ignore that advice. You have visions of dollar signs dancing behind your eyeballs. You think once you unload those two and a half lawn mowers, the torn trampoline that the kids won't play with, the patio umbrella that the squirrels got to and all those stupid books that Harry's been collecting for years, you'll probably have enough money to take a little holiday together.

I can tell you that you're going to need a holiday -- and not necessarily with your loved one, because you may not be speaking to each other after the garage sale -- but don't plan on anything pricey. The average take from the average yard sale is $11.99 -- and that's before you order in a pizza because you're too baffled to make dinner.

I really wish you'd reconsider. Hosting a full-fledged yard sale is not good for the heart. Oh, sure it's kind of refreshing to participate in a little primary capitalism -- no T4's to make out, no value-added tax to reckon, no Visa or Mastercard slips to juggle -- just simple, straightforward dickering. You want this? I own it. How much you gonna pay?

That's the Up side. The Down side is that when you hold your yard sale you will witness human behaviour at its least attractive level -- naked greed. Total strangers will park in your driveway for the opportunity to make fun of your taste. "You're asking two dollars for that? I can get five of them for two dollars down the street!"

The other thing is dignity. For people who insist on holding yard sales, there is none. And let's face it, your mother didn't raise you to spend a Sunday afternoon popping blood vessels in your head as you try to blow up your kid's used wading pool (five bucks -- as is) to prove that it doesn't leak.

But there's a much more important reason not to have your yard sale. Look at it this way: Holding a yard sale is going to punch a huge hole in your weekend. You have to man the cash box from dawn on Saturday until the last diehard haggler shuffles off your trampled lawn on Sunday night.

You realize what that means, don't you?

Just think of all the yard sales you'll be missing.

If the percentage increases in the Haliburton County education budget appearing in the May 4 edition of The Times continue, County taxpayers on average can expect their taxes to double in 6 years, 7m months, 7 days and 9 hours (plus or minus).

Anson, Hindon and Minden taxpayers specifically can expect a doubling of taxes in 6 years, 5 months, 27 days and 12 hours.

Acid rain

by Bill Kulas

Two months ago I wrote of the damage that acid rain is causing to our environment in general. How it is affecting the wildlife, the fish, the water and our beautiful maple forests. We in the Highlands inhabit, in my opinion, the most beautiful piece of land to be found anywhere in Canada. Why, if it weren't for those pesky black flies and mosquitoes and maybe, if we had a longer summer season, who would want to go elsewhere for their vacation?

We all have seen and heard or maybe read news reports regarding the threat that acid rain poses.

Acid rain is more than just rain. It also falls to earth as snow or fog. There are two main components to the dreaded pollution: sulphur dioxide and nitrogen oxides.

These gases combine with moisture to form sulphuric and nitric acid.

Acid rain can also carry such pollutants as lead and mercury. Recently the Ontario Ministry of the Environment reported in a study that mercury is contaminating Ontario fish.

Mercury, a highly toxic element which can cause kidney disease and nerve damage has turned up in perch and bass in several lakes throughout the Muskoka-Haliburton areas. The mercury is coming from acid rain, as there are no known geological deposits of mercury in the area.

The more acidic a lake, the higher the mercury levels were in the fish. The higher the level of mercury in the fish, the higher the health risk for those who eat the fish, don't you think? One thing, for sure, our fishery is certainly being degraded.

Eastern Canada is one of the hardest hit areas in terms of acid rain pollution in the world. Almost 50 per cent of the acid rain affecting most of eastern Canada comes from the United States. In our area almost 75 per cent of the acid rainfall comes from the U.S.

Are you concerned about acid rain pollution? What can be done about it? Write to us and express your views. More on acid rain pollution and its effects next week.

Injuries caused by the low temperatures of winter are commonly grouped into two general classes: (a) those due to the direct effect of cold upon trees, and (b) those due to indirect effects of the low temperatures. Direct effects of cold are referred to as freezing damage. The greatest factors influencing direct killing by cold are temperature and the age of the tree at the time of exposure. Indirect efforts are spoken of as winter injury or winter browning.

Winter browning is most common in evergreens (spruces and pines) but sometimes occurs in hardwoods. During periods of sudden rise in temperatures through the winter, moisture loss through the needles is accelerated. The water lost cannot be replaced, because either the soil is frozen and prevents water movement into the roots or the stem is frozen and water movement cannot occur. The result is a drying or desiccation of the plant tissues. Desiccation causes the killing of the needles and if buds are killed, the death of the entire tree. The foliage turns brown after injury of this sort.

The climatic conditions in February and March 1987 have been favourable for the development of winter browning. The brown or reddish brown tint of tree foliage which many people may see this spring is not related to acid rain but rather, the loss of moisture due to warm sunny weather prior to the ground thawing.

Damage is generally most severe on south facing slopes, the edges of plantations or in hedgerows. It is not uncommon to find the south of exposed side of a pine tree with brown

A constitutional concensus

- by Bill Scott, MP -

The Prime Minister and the ten provincial Premiers have reached a unanimous, groundbreaking accord unblocking the constitutional reform process.

The Meech Lake Agreement will allow Quebec to rejoin the Canadian constitution family and enables Canadians to turn their attention to other key constitutional issues, such as Senate reform and fisheries.

This historic agreement is good for Canada and good for Canadians. It enhances the Confederation bargain and strengthens the federal nature of Canada. It springs from the Canadian tradition of honourable compromise, and is a tribute to the statesmanship and leadership of all the First Ministers. The goal was to settle a constitutional impasse dating from 1926 - one that was imperfectly resolved in 1981 - to reconcile Quebec's special needs with the interests of the other provinces and the good of the country as a whole.

Officials will shortly begin drafting a constitutional text which reflects the Meech Lake agreement. The Prime Minister will be convening a conference with the Premiers within weeks to seek formal agreement. On the assumption a formal agreement is reached, the constitutional amending process will proceed. An amending resolution will be tabled in Parliament and in the Legislature of each province. Proclamation would follow once all the resolutions have been approved.

Speaking in the House, Prime Minister Mulroney reminded Members on both sides of the House of the words of Sir Wilfred Laurier, who said, "the governing motive of my life has been to harmonize the diverse elements which compose our country."

The essence of the Meech Lake agreement in principle:

- We agreed to recognize the distinctiveness Quebec brings to the Canadian federation, with its two principal language communities.

- We agreed to give constitutional protection to an expanded immigration agreement with Quebec and to enter into accords with other provinces, appropriate to their circumstances.

- We agreed to entrench the Supreme Court of Canada and the requirement that at least three of the nine justices appointed be from Quebec, and to provide for provincial involvement in Supreme Court appointments.

- We agreed that reasonable compensation be granted to provinces that do not participate in future national shared-cost programs in areas of exclusive jurisdiction, if they undertake their own initiatives or programs compatible with national objectives.

- We agreed that all provinces must approve changes to national institutions under section 42 of the 1982 Constitution Act and that the Government of Canada will provide reasonable compensation in all cases where a province opts out of an amendment transferring provincial jurisdiction to Parliament.

- We agreed that there will assist consumers with their complaints. Insurance companies will also have to provide greater disclosure of the information used to determine auto insurance rates.

In addition, the government will in future provide a rating classification system with greater equity, to prohibit the use of objectionable rating categories such as age, sex and marital status.

The next major step in insurance reform will result from the recommendations by Mr. Justice Coulter Osborne, who is examining the potential long-term benefits of a no-fault insurance system. Mr. Osborne's report is expected this fall.

Insurance premiums continue to rise

- by John Eakins, MPP -

As many in Victoria-Haliburton know, the issue of insurance premiums is one which has been the focus of a great deal of discussion during the last year.

Many companies and individuals have experienced tremendous increases in premiums and many have called on the government to respond.

There are no easy answers, but I feel the initiatives taken by the government recently will assist many.

In fact six million car drivers in Ontario will enjoy greater protection from excessively high auto insurance rates, as a result of new initiatives announced by the Ontario Government.

Effective April 23, 1987, the rates for all automobile insurance categories are capped at the present levels.

Legislation will be introduced early in the spring session of provincial parliament to control all insurance premiums in Ontario through an independent rate review board. This board will have powers to approve, adjust or roll back rates and order rebates to policy holders. Financial Institutions Minister Monte Kwinter said government action in the form of legislation was necessary because the insurance industry had not acted on its own.

"We have deliberately given the industry the time and the opportunity to improve market fairness; but in a system where automobile insurance is mandatory, we must place the interests of the consumer first," said Mr. Kwinter.

Further, my colleague has ordered a rate reduction for two rating classifications which have faced unjustifiably high auto insurance premiums. First, rates for all male drivers under age 25 will be reduced by 10 per cent. Second, rates for taxi cabs insured through the Ontario facility association will be cut by 10 per cent. Both reductions are effective as of April 23, 1987.

As well, a consumer insurance bureau, headed by an insurance advocate, will provide information and Shirley Rapson, the chamber manager, was in my office recently and I had the opportunity to be the first to buy our chamber's new cook book. This is a fund raising project organized by the special events committee. It has come just in time, as it will make a good gift for Mother's Day. If you would like to obtain a copy, please call the chamber office. The books are available either at the office or through various businesses throughout the County.

I would of course heartily recommend in a totally unabashed, somewhat biased fashion, the two entries by my mother-in-law Grace Earle. I have had needles and all other needles healthy and green in April.

Ozone, formed naturally by the action of sunlight on oxygen in the upper atmosphere and by electrical discharge during thunderstorms probably causes more plant damage than any other pollutant. In needle bearing trees, the most common types of damage are yellow mottling (spots on the needles) and tipburn. In the latter, the entire needle tip dies and becomes reddish-brown, looking very similar to winter browning.

Ozone injury coupled with winter browning contributes to the impression that forests are declining at an alarming rate. In actual fact, most of the affected trees will look perfectly healthy by June or July when the damaged needles have fallen off and the new growth has fully developed.

Since this problem is weather related, nothing can be done to reduce the effects in forests. In the case of ornamental plantings, trees can be protected during the winter by shielding with shades, wind deflectors, burlap wrapping or spraying with antidesiccants. In addition, thorough watering in the fall may be beneficial.

many a memorable Sunday night dinner in Minden. I do think it is great to try various recipes from people and lodges in our area.

I used to pride myself, before marriage, on my culinary abilities, consisting of homemade granola, rice pilaf and a variety of vegetarian dishes, of varying quality. (My joybean loaf sticks in my mind as well as other places.) However, eleven years of marriage has taught me that ignorance indeed is bliss. One chef in our household is sufficient.

Not giving any secrets away, I think I have got some of Mother's Day shopping already done. So pick up your copy of the cook book, all the recipes look interesting. Enjoy...

MP's questionnaire shows 85% for capital punishment

- by Bill Scott, MP -

The initial tallying of the results of my questionnaire has just been completed. It includes all responses received in my Ottawa office on or before April 24.

A total of 16,831 people responded. 14,307 (85.00%) voted in favour of a return to Capital Punishment and 2,517 (14.95%) voted against a return to Capital Punishment. The balance of 7 people were undecided.

Of those who voted for a return, 13,343 (93.26%) stated all first degree murders should be capital crimes and 896 people (6.26%) voted for a return only for first degree murders of police officers and prison guards. A total of 7818 (54.65%) were also in favour of murders committed during acts of terrorism or hostage taking being considered as capital crimes.

Among those who favour a return, 36.90% of respondents chose lethal injection as the preferred method of execution, 35.70% chose the choice of the condemned, 11.9% chose hanging, 8.11% chose electrocution and 4.25% chose the gas chamber.

There were just slightly more responses from women than men, 49.84% to 48.57%. age spread of respondents was 18 to 24, 696 (4.14%); 25 to 44, 5,561 (33.04%); 45 to 60, 4755 (28.25%); 61 plus, 5,504

(32.70%). Of all respondents 1.97% stated no age and 1.87% did not state their sex.

I thank all my constituents for responding in record numbers to this referendum. This is by far the largest response to any survey that I have ever distributed. It is over three times the response rate to a similar survey I sent out Capital Punishment in 1983.

Theatre ready to "Play On"

Once again a body litters the stage as the Haliburton Highlands Little Theatre group prepares for its spring production of the comedy "Play On" directed by Bonnie Fitzgerald. The rollicking farce involves a cast of a summer stock theatre company caught up in a web of intrigue. The play opens this Thursday at the Haliburton Highland Secondary School and continues Friday and Saturday nights with the curtain rising at 8 p.m. The players have announced that all proceeds from the spring production will be donated to the Haliburton Hospital Expansion fund.

Branch 129 elects new executive

The Haliburton Branch 129 Legion meeting last Thursday night was well attended and though there were few surprises, the election of branch officers and executives was the centre of th attention.

Joan Irish is the new president for the third consecutive term. Irish ran alongside Doug Pritchard. Mabel Brannigan and Fred Knight were also nominated but declined to stand.

Brannigan is the new first vice-president. She ran against Allin Cooper and Gerry Irish. Pritchard and Knight were both nominated but declined. Wayne Wood is the new second vice-president. Wood won the vote against Sylvia Sisson. Also nominated were Gerry Irish and Earl Shipley who declined.

Steve Giles is the new third vice-president. Also in the running was Lloyd Whittaker. Reg Crockett and Irv Chambers declined to stand.

Jack Bassett and Wally Chambers won their posts of secretary and treasurer respectively, by acclamation.

Irv Chambers is the new sergeant-at-arms. Chambers ran against Jim Hobson.

The new executive are: Ed Pickard, Ken Fieldhouse, Grenville Draper, Allin Cooper, Gerry Irish and Fred Knight.

Also in the running for executive posts were: Irene Higgins, Reg Crockett and Sylvia Sisson.

Steve Giles, Wally Chambers, Bruce McKay, Earl Shipley, Lloyd Whittaker, Irv Chambers and Wayne Wood were nominated, but declined.

There were 126 voting members of the branch present at the election.

The new branch auditors are Dawson, Grey and Dart.

Surrounded by the executive, Joan Irish, left, begins her third term as president of Royal Canadian Legion Branch 129, Haliburton.

secretary Jean Marsh, treasurer Margaret Finlay, sergeant at arms Joan Hobson. Executive Verna Draper, Jane Johnston, Catherine Juby, Eileen Morrison, Fay McKay and Kay Wylie. Honourary executive Greta Curry, Myrtle Davies, Edith Day and sports officer Irene Higgins.

Branch 129 news

by Gerald Irish

At the District F Convention in Belleville, many reports were given. The District membership report was interesting. Last year District F has an increase of 161 Ordinary, Life and Associate members and this year the increase was 207. Your Zone F4 once again won the Paddy Burke Membership Trophy for the largest numerical increase in Ordinary and Life members with a plus 46. Fred Knight, zone membership chairman and Branch 129 membership chairman deserves congratulations for this, his third win in three years.

The District F Bursary report informed us that financial assistance to students in our district amounted to $14,300.00.

1985 District Poppy receipts totalled $228,550.57 an increase over the previous year of 5.4%.

Branch 129 showed an increase of 13.7%, one of the highest in the district.

Guest speaker at the convention banquet was Comrade Horace Tudhope, Provincial Command Second Vice President. In his address to the nearly 400 delegates and guests, Comrade Horace made reference to some very disturbing statistics such as, Legion will lose 25,000 members per year due to non-renewals and deaths. Legion must plan now for the next ten years.

Each Legion member must be convinced now of the needed changes. He encouraged all branches to get younger people to higher offices as soon as possible.

Comrade Horace said "We must overcome the attitude of those who would let the Legion die with the last veteran. The veterans should encourage and teach the younger members now. It is estimated that two million prospective associate members are out there. We must get them. We must involve them. Success must come at the branch level. Face the future, thinking of the past. With younger members we can continue to be a viable force on in to the future."

The provincial second vice president also paid high compliments to the Ladies Auxiliaries and referred to them as "the right arm of the legion."

The 1988 District Convention will be held in Oshawa. The 1988 District Drumhead will be in Havelock. Don't forget, this year, your branch in Haliburton will host the District Drumhead. If every branch in District sends representatives there will be legionnaires from 54 branches here. Work on the Drumhead has already started.

The bi-annual Provincial Convention is being held in Kingston this year near the end of May. Your branch will have delegates there.

Congratulations to Army Cadet C.O. Wayne W. Wood on his promotion to Captain.

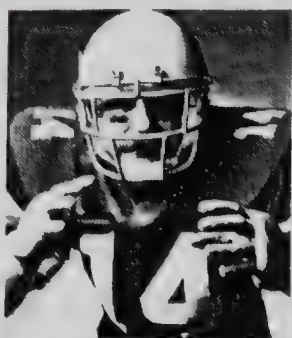

The Cadet's graduation ceremonies will be held in front of the curling club Saturday, May 30 at 2 p.m.

Stanhope blaze tamed

A fire in Stanhope Township, believed to be the work of children, destroyed about 12 acres of brush and small trees last Friday afternoon. No one was hurt in the blaze. Fire departments from Stanhope, Dysart and the Ministry of Natural Resources responded to the call.

The fire began about 3:30 on Friday. Firemen evacuated nearby homes, and at least one house was threatened.

In the picture above, Stanhope councillor Ann Barker offers soft drinks to the firefighters to slake their thirsts.

Gas barbecues are a convenient and economical way to enjoy outdoor cooking, but they must be used carefully and kept in good condition.

Every summer, backyard chefs are injured and property is damaged in gas barbecue fires. Here are a few safety tips to ensure your barbecue parties don't go up in smoke.

1. There's only one way to connect a propane cylinder to a barbecue - the right way. Follow the manufacturer's instructions closely and keep the fuel hose away from any metal parts which may become hot.
2. Check for leaks regularly: Brush a soap and water solution over hoses and connectors and open the cylinder valve. If there's a leak, bubbles will form in the soap film.
3. Keep your barbecue at least 10 feet from buildings, overhangs and combustible structures.
4. Don't try to light a barbecue with the lid closed. If it fails to light or goes out, turn the gas off and wait five minutes before relighting.
5. When finished, close all valves.
6. Never bring propane cylinders indoors.

A small leak can cause a major explosion.

7. If you suspect your barbecue isn't working properly, have it checked by a qualified serviceman.

Make sure you don't have to invite the fire department to your next barbecue. For a free copy of the brochure "Living Safely with Propane", contact the Consumer Information Centre at 555 Yonge St., Toronto, Ontario M7A 2H6 - (416) 963-1111 or toll free at 1-800-268-1142.

Most people are poor, by our standards words of the language in order to get around. "It generally takes about a week to find your feet."

But Peru, Stouffer says, was a different story. One of the things that struck him first about the country was the poverty.

"Most people by North American standards are poor, about 95 per cent of them in fact, he says. "The other five per cent live in the lap of luxury."

But the statistic is misleading because, "the poor, despite their lack of material possessions are a lot happier than the average Canadian Yuppie," he says.

Most Peruvians live in simple houses with tin roofs. They drive about on motor cycles - Stouffer has seen whole families on one bike - and many survive on little more than $2.50 a day, the minimum wage in that country.

The cost of living, though, is very low (Stouffer stayed in luxurious hotels for only a fraction of similar Canadian accommodation) and the Peruvian culture is rich.

Among Stouffer's photographs of his trip are many of village peasant festivals. Everyone is dressed in bright, colourful costumes and the atmosphere seems always festive.

Vast expanses

He explains that often it is impossible to properly

Elgin Stouffer, right, explains some of the details of his recent trip to Peru to Harold Deacon. Stouffer spent thirteen weeks in the South American country providing advice for those involved in the Peruvian lumber industry.

describe what he experienced in Peru. "It's like the mountains," he says. "The Andes were so vast I couldn't even take a picture of them. I couldn't get far enough back to fit them into my field of vision."

His pictures show not so much scenery as pieces of scenery; tops or bottoms of mountains, views looking down from look-outs that because of the two dimensional nature of a photograph, flatten the sense of depth.

Perhaps what makes it difficult to describe Peru, says Stouffer, is the fact that it is a country of contrasts, of high mountains, of dry savannahs, of huge rain forests.

"As you drive up toward the Andes, you pass through some pretty wet, hot country," he says. "As you start to gain altitude in the foothills, it gets cooler. And once you reach the higher altitudes, people are wearing winter coats and the forest has changed from tropical to evergreen - what we have here."

One of Peru's biggest problems is unemployment. "Every year the universities there train 500 lawyers," says Stouffer. "But there are only jobs for 50 of them."

He says the result is that Peru can boast some highly educated bandits. The crime rate there, he says, is one of the highest in the world. Every year 400 policemen are killed.

The company he worked for was based in Lima, the capital city. Stouffer explained that every night a curfew was enforced and during those hours, he would always hear the sound of guns. "People would just empty their weapons at whatever moved," he says.

Besides Communist guerillas in the mountains blowing up power station, Peru also suffers from powerful, well-armed bandits who do a thriving business in cocaine. Stouffer says the illegal drug is one of the country's biggest exports. But the government has so far been unable to do much to stop it.

Stouffer says that he had to be careful on his trip not to go in dangerous places and to obey the curfew. "I didn't have any problems," he remarks.

He believes the difficulties facing the country are serious enough, but cautions that they shouldn't be exaggerated.

"Sure, a lot of people are killed by bandits and guerrillas," he says. "But in Canada more people are killed every year in traffic accidents."

Lumber potential

As a technical advisor to a Peruvian lumber company, Stouffer has the opportunity first hand to get a look at the country's forests and lumber industry.

He marvels at the potential of Peru as a producer. "It's supply of trees - the Amazon jungle - is almost limitless," he says. "There are 2,500 different varieties and many of them produce high quality lumber certainly as good as what we have in Canada."

But he points out that there are problems. First, the jungles are a long way from the country's ports and major cities. So lumber must be trucked great distances.

Second, the stands of timber aren't pure - all 2,500 tree species grow together. The operation of separating them would be expensive.

And interestingly, there's a third problem that arises from the fact that the Amazon jungle grows on what is really a large delta: What stones there are covered in hundreds of thousands of years' silt accumulation, so during rainy season heavy equipment is useless.

Peruvian lumber industry has great potential says Stouffer

These obstacles, says Stouffer, are being overcome by the Peruvians. The lumber industry has just bought $6 million worth of Canadian high-tech sawmill equipment and is looking to expand its markets.

"I was taken on," he says, "to help set up the new equipment and also to explain to them about the North American lumber market which they'd very much like to break into."

He says the Peruvians are unfamiliar with the United States and Canada and value the opinion of someone who is not only a native of the continent but also knowledgeable about the lumber market here.

While in Peru, Stouffer wasn't paid a salary but all his living expenses were met by the Peruvian lumber company he worked with an the Canadian government.

His work also left him time to look around the country and visit some of the ancient Inca ruins.

One of his favourite trips was to the famous site of Macchu Picchu, an Inca city on a remote mountain top, that was deserted by its builders hundreds of years ago and only discovered by Westerners in 1911. Stouffer's photographs of the ruins are spectacular.

Interestingly, he says, because so many of the places he visited in Peru are high in the Andes, he did suffer at first from altitude sickness.

"It wasn't very nice at first," he says, "but I learned to get over it with a local remedy called cocoa tea. After drinking a few cups of the mixture, I felt just fine."

Another aspect of the country he enjoyed was the architecture. Many Peruvian cities and towns are dominated by elaborate baroque churches and town halls built by the Spanish when they ruled the country. Now the Spanish have gone but they've left behind their beautiful stucco buildings, says Stouffer.

"Peru is not a difficult place to live," he says, "though there is a lot of dissatisfaction among the people and injustice, the people are happy; they make do very well with what they've got. Food is cheap and if you have to grow your own, you can plant a banana tree clipping and eight months later have a mature tree with a 75 pound bunch of bananas on it," he explains.

At one point, Stouffer says, his hosts asked him if he would like to return to Peru. "I thought for a bit and then I said yes, I would."

Voices of HHSS

Hi! As you saw in the newspaper last week, the results of the Kawartha West track meet were posted and those people who placed first, second or third went on to the Kawartha Track and Field competition last Thursday, May 7 at Trent University in Peterborough. HHSS is proud to report the large number of competitors qualified for it. The next level of competition is COSSA which shall be held this week.

On May 10-13 the HHSS concert and stage bands will be participating in a band exchange with a Kingston area school. Many new experiences will be had with this music trip. Soon after, the HHSS concert band will be hosting their fellow musicians from Sharbot Lake as the students come here for a few days.

The girls soccer team has been travelling and hosting other schools with successful wins and a few losses in both the junior and senior divisions. Miss Notley and her teams played at LCVI last Wednesday and we will have the results of this game next week.

The Elim Hall and Level heads concert was fabulous for all who attended on May 8. The music was good and obviously the audience enjoyed themselves. The organizers should be proud.

With intramurals, the co-ed baseball is continuing outside at the diamond through the month of May.

On May 19, Mr. Penfold and some grade eleven English students will be going to Niagara-on-the-Lake to watch a modern play at the Shaw Festival.

On May 22 a dance will be held at the high school. We'll have details later when they're made available.

Team selection took place last week in archery. The combined Kawartha and COSSA tournament will take place May 20.

Obviously, this is a very busy time for all students' book reports are scrambling to be completed, tests are being crammed for and essays being struggled to be finished.

The long, warm summer break which is nearing shall be of great relief to everyone. The students won't have to wear a hard, plastic chair for a while, teachers won't have to wear dresses and ties and of being embarrassed when they don't always have all the answers to the machine-gun like questions....

Until next week.

Heather Donaldson, Misti

Campbell, Katy Beach,
Dianne Garbutt.

Injured bird released

An injured Broad Winged Hawk, is back in the air again, thanks to the interest of Al Smith of Stanhope Township and Minden Animal Clinic Veterinarian Peter Bennett.

The hawk was seen Wednesday at about 9:30 a.m. on Highway 118 east for Carnarvon by Smith. "The bird was sitting on the road, in the traffic lane, with its eyes closed," Smith commented.

The man wrapped the bird in his jacket and gently placed it in his car. Smith speculates the bird had been struck by a vehicle and was in a semi-conscious state. He noted the bird did not struggle or seem to be aware of his presence when he picked it up.

Smith then headed for the vet's office north of Minden. "The bird started to come to as I got close to town," Smith recalls. "He was looking around and obviously concerned about the situation he had awoken in." Smith was a little concerned as well, noting the strong beak and sharp talons of the once comatose bird.

The bird remained confined, however, until they reached the veterinarian's office. Dr. Bennett determined that the hawk did not have any broken bones and was likely suffering from a concussion. The bird was kept overnight to give it time to recover from the experience and was then released. Dr. Bennett reports the bird took to the air immediately and appeared not to be suffering any ill effects from its ordeal as it soared off into the sky.

Firemen from Minden and Stanhope responded to a call for assistance Thursday afternoon when a garage belonging to Gary Chapman caught fire. As a consequence of the burning building, the surrounding bush started to burn.

The Chapman property is located on the east shore of Mountain Lake where a steep incline and steady breeze off the lake contributed to the rapid spread of the flames. Firemen had difficulty reaching the burning brush but were able to contain the blaze after a lengthy battle.

A volunteer hoses down the charred remains of the garage while Minden fireman Stan Brown gets wrapped up in his work as he prepares to head uphill with another length of hose.

Naturalist takes aim at 2,4-D

One day in April, Ontario Hydro notified Ron Lawrence, a Glamorgan resident, that they intended to spray the herbicide 2,4-D beneath a powerline close to his property.

Lawrence - who happens to be a writer and naturalist of some note - objected. He sent letters to both Hydro and the Ministry of the Environment complaining that 2,4-D is a potential poison, the effects of which are not yet completely understood. He said he didn't want the chemical used near his property.

The two government bodies responded promptly. Representatives were dispatched and a meeting with Lawrence was held at the proposed spray site. In short order, says Lawrence, it was agreed by Hydro and the Environment Ministry that the brush beneath the powerline would be best removed without the use of chemicals.

Though he's relieved with the conclusion of the meeting, Lawrence is deeply concerned with the fact that the controversial herbicide is still used by home owners and the government just about everywhere else in Ontario.

"And what if I hadn't been a writer," he asks, "would they have responded s quickly to my complaints?" 2,4-D has been used in Canada for a long time now, since 1947. Almost 300 products containing the herbicide are used in Ontario today. The fight against its use has also been going on for some years, and there is now a considerable body of evidence that suggests 2,4-D is a health hazard. Some studies link it to cancer in humans and deformed animal fetuses.

Though it is said to break down after being released into the environment, opponents of the brush killer say that some of the products of the breakdown are as much as four times more toxic than 2,4-D itself.

Many countries have stopped using the herbicide. It has been banned in most of Scandinavia as well as a number of American states.

Recently the World Health Organization issued a declaration against the use of 2,4-D, which it advised all other nations to sign. (Canada did).

In response to the evidence against the herbicide, Ontario Environment Minister James Bradley placed a ban on all new products containing 2,4-D last fall.

In April, however, Bradley removed the ban on the advice of a panel of experts appointed by the Ontario Government. In fact one of the experts, according to the Toronto Star, declared that 2,4-D is no more hazardous than eating peanut butter.

One study leads to another

The government's action, says Lawrence, is typical of its treatment of the issue of 2,4-D. It follows the advice of whoever has the loudest voice - which in this case is the pesticide industry.

So when he asks if Hydro and the Environment ministry would have listened to his objections about spraying had he not been a writer with a public voice, he knows he's hit on a very important point.

"Whenever a study appears showing that 2,4-D is hazardous you get another study, usually from the chemical companies, showing that it's harmless."

The results from such studies cannot be impartial, he fears. Lawrence believes there is enough evidence pointing to 2,4-D as a dangerous substance to justify a complete ban on its use. And logically he asks, "Even if there isn't enough evidence, must we wait for proof that it's toxic to more than just weeds?"

But the problem is much larger than 2,4-D he says. He believes it extends to all chemical pesticides used in Ontario and they way they're regulated by the government.

"It was only a few years ago," he pointed out, "that anti-pollution activists were fighting to have DDT and 2,4-D banned. The pesticide industry called claims against their products crackpot." The government eventually accepted findings that both 2,4-D and DDT are toxic and put a stop to their use in Canada.

Lawrence says there are likely many chemical pesticides on the market that might fall into the same category as DDT and 2,4-D.

"I'm not an activist but I believe something should be done. We're dealing with the potential destruction of the environment and health threats to humans."

The key to getting the government to act is to be heard at Queen's Park, Lawrence has learned. He was successful in halting a plan to spray a small piece of land near his home by himself, but he realizes he'd have to face considerably more resistance if he tried to get an outright ban on 2,4-D.

So he's joined forces with the Haliburton County Anti-Pollution Committee, a group formed some years ago by Minden resident Sonya Holliday-Rhodes, that was instrumental in winning the fight against 2,4-D.

Other members of the group include Michael Collins, a retired biochemist, Dr. Kenneth Colby, a University of Toronto professor and resident of the county and Gordon Smith, a Carnarvon naturopath.

"We're a loosely organized group of people with similar interests in getting the government to take a closer look at some of the pesticides being released into the environment," explains Lawrence.

The idea is to work together. That way they will be heard.

The group has already worked out a campaign plan. To start, says Lawrence, they'll focus on getting 2,4-D banned. And using it as a concrete example, they'll try to show how other pesticides being used now are just as dangerous.

Public education will be an important element of the campaign. Lawrence has already written newspaper articles documenting the effects of 2,4-D and he's considering the possibility of writing a handbook on the subject.

And recently, Gordon Smith, another group member, had a letter published in the Toronto Star in which he attempted to explain the folly of the notion that 2,4-D is as harmless as peanut butter.

Smith is also responsible for having some No Spray signs printed which are to be placed around the county.

Last summer both Smith and Lawrence approached some of the local municipal councils asking for a ban on the brush killer.

The group welcomes anyone interested in helping with the effort and they are invited to call Gordon Smith at 489-2763.

Group members know they've got a big fight ahead of them, but they believe it's worth it. As Lawrence says, "we're dealing with a potential poison."

Help children discover nature

by Faith Aggett

Science can be anything from weighing and measuring objects to the study of wildlife. Once you begin to explore that world, the possibilities are endless. It does not stop with labs and beakers, procedures and summaries. To the child it is living and understanding the mechanics of the world around him.

And around us in parks fields and woods, there are wild animals, birds, insects and reptiles to see and enjoy. What a thrill to see some wild creature!

Children and nature

Understanding the electrical theory of a thunderstorm or observing the colour prisms of a rainbow can be explained as technically or simply as the age allows. Children will easily understand how changing weather affects every aspect of their lives. Learning the concepts of more/less, large/small, light/heavy, magnetic/non-magnetic can be fun, hands-on experiments that will be repeatedly enjoyed with curious vigour.

You and your children will find the adventure of exploring the world around you a fascinating one. What child has not wondered...at the beauty of a new-made spider web glistening with dew...how the robin finds the worm...what makes thunder and lightning. With a preschooler, anything they can concretely see or touch and thus relate to, is fuel for topic.

School age children develop more complex thinking and can grasp more abstract theory. But all children are inspired to greater effort by a genuine interest shown in their activities. By sharing their experiences with them as frequently as possible, parents can contribute greatly to their child's development. Children probably learn as much from accurate answers to their many questions as they do from the study of text books. As adults we often learn a great deal ourselves while opening up our children's world!

Defoliation concerns county residents

Are worms defoliating your trees?

Many people throughout Haliburton County have expressed concern about the small worms defoliating trees in the area.

The insects have been identified as a mixture of spring and fall Cankerworms and the Bruce Spanworm. All of these caterpillars are commonly called loopers because of their peculiar manner of moving about. They vary greatly in colour from pale green to almost black, with longitudinal lines on the body. The eggs of each of these insects hatch when leaves begin to unfold in late April or early May. The larvae will feed until late June then drop to the ground and pupate. Adults of the fall Cankerworm and Bruce Spanworm will emerge in late October and November, while those of the spring Cankerworm will emerge in the early spring. The adults are greyish moths; however only the males are winged. The wingless females crawl up the trunk of the tree and lay their eggs around small twigs. Each produces one generation per year.

The caterpillars feed first on the tender unfolding leaves and buds, later consuming the entire leaves except for the mid-rib and larger veins. In heavy infestation, the whole tree may be stripped of its foliage early in the season. The effects can look quite devastating as has been noted by people in our area where infestations have occurred.

If a second crop of leaves is put forth, the effort greatly weakens the tree, making it more susceptible to other insects and diseases. Complete defoliation in two or more consecutive years may kill a tree. This will be the third year infestations have occurred throughout Haliburton County. There may be about ten years between peaks of high populations of these caterpillars.

Control of cankerworms in the bush is dependant upon natural parasites, predators, birds, stormy weather or freezing temperatures. Bacterial and viral diseases also help to regulate infestations naturally.

Protection to ornamental and yard trees can be obtained by spraying the young caterpillars in the spring when they become visible. Most insecticides give effective control especially bacillus, carbaryl, malathion, methoxychlor or endosulfan. It is important that the caterpillars are wetted with the spray in order to kill them.

Another protection is to band the tree trunks in the fall and spring with a sticky material called tanglefoot.

This will trap the wingless females as they ascend the trunk to lay their eggs; however, this can only be effective on isolated trees.

Remember, insecticides are poisonous and should be handled with care. Follow carefully the instructions and safety precautions printed on the manufacturers label.

The Ministry of Tourism and Recreation in conjunction with the Ministry of Natural Resources will provide vacancy reports on provincial parks this summer, Ontario Minister of Tourism and Recreation John Eakins announced recently.

Campers will again be able to rely on accurate, up-to-date information on 53 provincial parks bounded by Killarney Provincial Park near Sudbury in the North, Windsor in the southwest and by Carillon Provincial Park near Hawkesbury in the east.

A 24 hour recorded report is available to Toronto callers at 963-2992. Campers throughout the province call toll-free numbers at 1-800-268-3735 in English and 1-800-268-3736 in French. The toll-free service operates seven days a week from 8 a.m. until 6 p.m. starting May 15.

From May 15 to June 26, reports will be issued on Fridays. After June 26, the reports will be updated daily. Each park in the reporting program will provide two figures. The actual vacancy as of 3 p.m. and a predicted vacancy for 8 p.m. that evening. The reports will run until September 4.

Information can also be obtained from the Ontario Travel Information Centres listed in the provincial government blue pages of the telephone directory.

Reservations for specific provincial park sites can be Well Folks; lovely weather, but we do need rain very badly.

Our Sunday eve service was in charge of Rev. J. Burgess and Mr. Thompson. Tuesday morning was in the charge of Father George Elliott of Minden Anglican church.

Our tea party ladies were from Lochlin United Church with a delightful lunch serving cake and ice cream.

The birthdays for April were Mrs. Nesbitt, Mrs. Jarvis, Dora Dawson, Tessa Davis, Gordon Ruttle and Mrs. Casey. They all wore cute little hats.

Edna Cowan spent the weekend with her family. Mr. and Mrs. Don Brohm of Lindsay called on me for a short visit Sunday afternoon.

Friday afternoon a program of current events took place in the auditorium which was really fun and educational.

On Monday Doris took a bus load of folks to the museum to see the unveiling of the Millstones of long ago and on Tuesday she took us for a drive to Bobcaygeon which was very nice indeed.

The movies Monday evening were "Fly Geese Fly", "Changing Greenland", and "Wilderness Treasure." We found them very interesting.

Jean and George Hewitt came Sunday afternoon and took me for a drive to Brady's Lake. I thought I might see the old Hindon Hill School, but the trees have gotten so thick you can't see through them, but the orange lilies are still there in dozens. We were out for dinner and then home.

Edith Welch had her son to see her on the weekend.

We welcome another new resident Mrs. Hunter to Hyland Crest. Hope she will like it here.

We sing "I need thee every hour" but grumble about spending one in church.

Till next week.

Historic millstones dedicated

The following remarks were offered by Stan Hill, president of the Minden County Town Museum Committee at the official unveiling of the millstones taken from mills operating in Minden at the turn of the century.

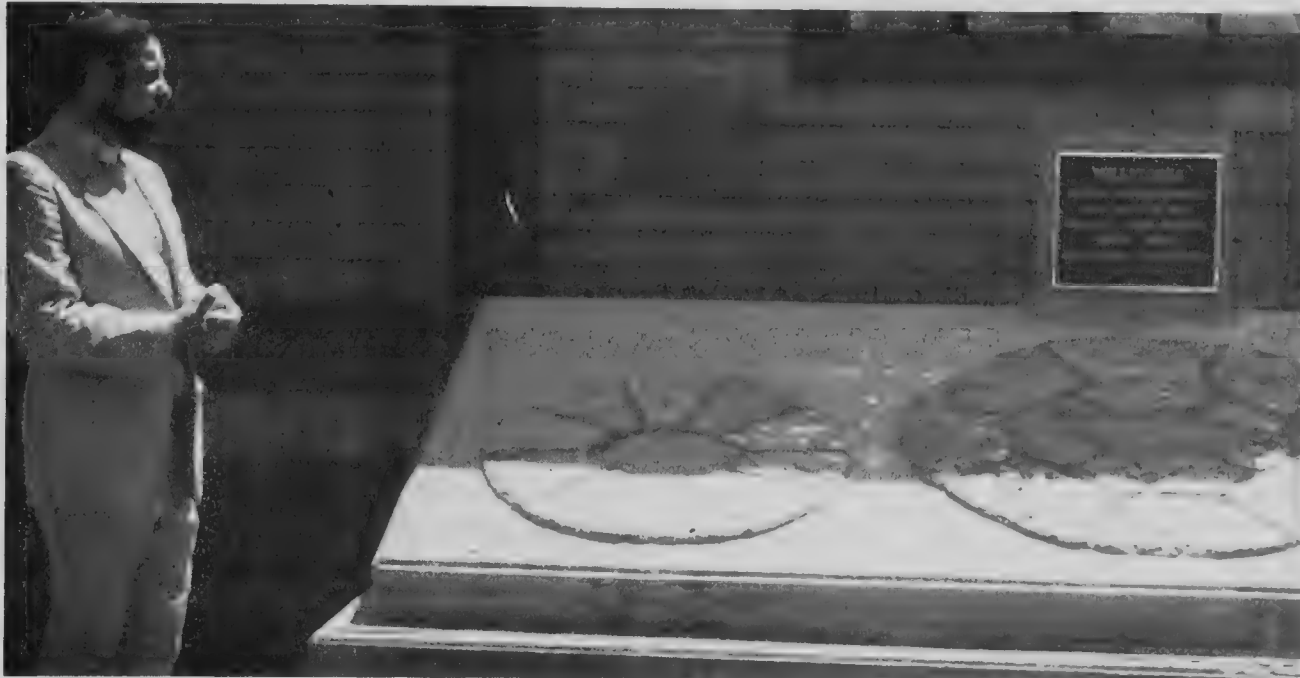

Before the white man arrived this was the hunting and fishing grounds of the Indians. They came from Lake Simcoe, by way of Balsam lake and the Gull River waterways.

In the early 1800's, there were expeditions through the wilderness looking for a practical route between Georgian Bay and Ottawa. Soon after Thompson's journey in 1837, men arrived to cut great quantities of white pine and float them down the Gull River system. Some of them were used for masts of the sailing ships of England.

Soon a Colonization road was surveyed from Bobcaygeon to Dorset and settlements were established. One of the first requirements after a house was built were the mills for lumber and later mills for grinding the wheat. At one time, Minden area residents had to take their grain by canoe to Coboconk.

Nelson Rogers and George Rogers had a mill at Brighton, then Nelson Rogers moved to South Lake. In 1899 along with his son Fred, he established the grist and flour mill on Beaver Creek. This operated until 1920.

It is our good fortune to have the millstones donated to the County Town Museum.

Reverend George Elliott of St. Paul's Anglican Parish dedicates the antique millstones unveiled Monday, May 4 at the Minden County Town Museum. The stones were donated by Mr. and Mrs. Austen and were used in mills along the Gull River at the turn of the century.

"WHERE THE ACTION IS"

Staanworth Court news

submitted

It is so nice to see the green grass again, hear the birds singing and the warm weather as we sit out on our patios here at Staانworth.

Welcome home again to Mabel and Len Trodd from the sunny south.

Lillian and George Davidson recently returned from a trip to Toronto where George was given a very encouraging report healthwise from his hospital. We are happy for you George and Lil.

Ivy Angliss was called to see her daughter Gail who was rushed to Etobicoke General Hospital. We understand that she is improving and we all wish her well. Also Ivy tells me that she does not see too much change in her husband's health. He is in Peterborough Civic Hospital and has been there for some time. We trust God will give you strength to meet these Ivy.

Some of our residents participate in Wheels to Meals at the Wagon Wheel Restaurant where they enjoy the meals, the social atmosphere and the euchre games that follow after the meal.

So it is time for house cleaning! Perhaps this rule adopted by Phyllis Diller, the comedienne, may appeal to you, namely: If it is solid, clean it - If it moves, step on it.

A very tasty supper, prepared by our convenors Kathy Thorn and Melissa Hampson and their helpers, was enjoyed by us all last week. The tables looked so colourful with their flower arrangements. The meal consisted of roasted chicken legs, vegetables, buns, salads and pies. Here we were introduced to our new residents, Mel and Doris Foster by Corinne. We welcome them and hope they will enjoy our friendship. After our meal, we shared a beautiful cake with our birthday folks, Vera Howe, Lillian Davidson, Shirley Vank and Eleanor Pye. May you enjoy many more jolly days.

AT REST

KELLETT, Wallie - At his residence in Sudbury on Saturday, April 25, in his 71st year. Beloved husband of Sarah. Dear father of Karen, Christine and Michael. Loving grandfather of 4 grandchildren. Fondly remembered by many brothers and sisters. Son of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Kellett. Private family service was held at Graveside of the Minden Cemetery.

IN MEMORIAM

GILBANK, Beatrice Jane. In loving memory of our dear mother who passed away May 17, 1986. God saw you getting tired When a cure was not to be, So He closed His arms around you And whispered 'Come to Me' Every time we think of you We seem to hear God say "Have faith and trust My promise, You will meet again some day." A few more steps along life's road, Perhaps a few more years, Then by God's grace we'll meet again, Beyond the vale of tears.

Always remembered and deeply missed, Jean & Harry Bertha & Pete.

IN MEMORIAM

KITCHEMAN, Sandy - Again in the month of May My thoughts are still with you, But safe in the arms of God, The place He saved for you. Your ever-devoted Mom, Sadie

MAGILL, Bea - In loving memory of my dear wife who passed away May 16, 1986. My lips cannot tell how I miss her, My heart cannot tell what to say, God alone knows how I miss her, In a home that is lonesome today.

Always remembered,
Jim
